Dear Lin,

18/11/17

Thank you so much for your interesting letter concerning the former BCR weighbridge building and its current developments. I am able to be of some possible assistance and am pleased to enclose a couple of prints.

The first was taken on my very first visit to Bishop's Castle on Sunday, 14 August 1955 when there was nobody about at all. I cannot be certain whether, at that time, the weighbridge was still in place but you will see that the guardrail protecting it certainly was which makes it likely, I feel.

My second visit was on Saturday, 7 October 1961 but unfortunately my unexposed negative does not include the actual weighbridge area. However, I am fairly certain that by then all trace of the table and guardrail had disappeared. Again not a soul in sight.
